St. Petersburg, FL – February 20, 2008 – PilotMall.com today announced the release of Fly Utah! It's a set of two volumes that encompass a treasure trove of backcountry airstrips in what may be the last aviation frontier of the American West. With Fly Utah! don't expect paved foot trails with cutesy little informational signs. Be the first to explore ancient Anasazi cliff dwellings or squeeze through a thousand-foot-deep, 2-foot-wide slot canyon. Search for the lost gold mines of the Spanish Conquistadors and trade at an authentic Indian trading post – far off the beaten tourist path.

Fly Utah! contains 950 pages, and 83 airstrips (57 of which are previously uncharted). Airstrips range from a challenging 500' overgrown strip clinging to a sandstone cliff to an exquisite 1900' long, thin-air mountain strip at 9200' elevation with several mild-mannered ones (and even a couple paved strips) mixed in for variety. Lots of primitive airplane camping and a few top-notch lodges and resorts.

"Here at PilotMall.com, we understand that pilots are adventurous and explorers. We wanted to provide our customers with a product that will fulfill this need," said PilotMall.com President Neil Glazer. "After researching many products on the market, we found the innovative Fly Utah! and with this book, Exploration and discovery is what it's all about!"
